Information Concerning Same May Be Obtained from

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Conditions of Proposals—Title Papers, Survey, Etc.—Must Be Received Before July 20.

Treasury Department, Office of the Supervising Architect, Washington, D. C.

Upon the enactment of a law authorizing the acquisition of a site for a Federal building, through a local newspaper, proposals for the sale or donation of a suitable corner.

The offers are opened in Washington at the time stated in the advertisement, and as soon thereafter as practicable an agent of the Department is sent to make a personal examination of the proposed locations and such others as he deems desirable. Based on the agent's report, together with representations in writing from other sources, the Department selects the site and, if the property is to be acquired by purchase, accepts the offer of the successful bidder, subject to the conditions hereinafter stated and the Attorney General's approval of the title. No intermediary between the landowner and the Government is necessary or desirable at any stage of this business.

Whenever the Department is unable to purchase an acceptable site at a reasonable price, or where acceptable title can not be secured by voluntary conveyance, a selection is made and the title acquired by condemnation proceedings, in which the price to be paid is judicially determined. The buildings (if any) on the site should be reserved by the vendor, to be removed upon notice after payment for the land has been made. Generally, notice to clear the site is not given until the construction of the Federal building is about to begin; if the vendor is willing, pending such removal, to pay a reasonable ground rent.

There is usually a large volume of site business before the Department, and while such work receives unremitting attention until finished, it is not always practicable to dispose of a particular case as speedily as desired by the parties interested. Bidders are at liberty (in case of failure of the Department to make a selection within a reasonable time) to withdraw their proposals, but will be expected by the Department to give notice of such intention.

Plans for public buildings are taken up in the order in which the titles to the sites therefor are vested in the United States, and the contracts for their construction are let at as early a date as practicable.

Proposals

No special form of proposal is required, but the offer must be in writing, addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, and should indicate definitely the location and dimensions of the property and the price at which it is offered. The proposal must be accompanied by a diagram or plan on a sheet 8 by 10 1/2 inches on which the following data must be clearly indicated, viz:

1. An outline map of the land offered, showing accurately its shape and the dimensions in feet and inches of each side.
2. The width from lot line to lot line of adjacent streets, width of sidewalks, width of roadway between curbs, and whether or not paved and the character of the paving.
3. The width and location of adjacent alleys, and whether public or private, paved or unpaved.
4. The location in adjacent streets or alleys of gas, water, and heating mains; electric-light conduits or overhead electric-light wires or cables; sewers, with their depth below street level and their diameters, and whether they are sanitary or storm-water sewers, or both.
5. Where there are gas or heating mains in the streets or alleys, the kind of gas supplied (natural or artificial) and the kind of heating (steam or hot water) should be shown.
6. If no sewers are in adjacent streets a statement from the City Engineer must be secured and attached to the plat showing the distance from the property offered to the nearest sewer with which connection could be made and the amount of fall between the property offered and the sewer to be connected with.
7. The plat or diagram must have indicated thereon the location of any right of way, sewer, conduit, steam or water pipes, cables or wires which may be upon, under, or over the property, under any easement or permission.

KILLED ON RAILROAD

Adam Hamaker Crushed on Tracks of Bedford and Hollidaysburg.

About 9 o'clock yesterday morning Adam Hamaker was crushed to death on the tracks of the Bedford and Hollidaysburg Railroad near the water plug beyond Cessna.

Mr. Hamaker, in company with other workmen, was on a handcar when a work train approached. Knowing that they could not remove the car the trackmen jumped. Hamaker alighted in front of the car and was knocked down by it, after which the work train passed over him, severing his head from his body.

Mr. Hamaker was about 35 years of age. Obituary next week.

COUNCIL MEETING

Warnings for Autoists to be Placed at Corners and Borough Limits.

The regular meeting of Council was held Tuesday evening of this week, when bills amounting to $288.23 were approved for payment. Water Commissioner Crouse reported the Milburn and Gravel Hill reservoirs about full and the Todd about four inches below the overflow.

Simon Oppenheimer appeared before Council and addressed them on the subject of providing signs at street crossings to warn autoists to signal. The Street Committee was authorized to have signs placed at the borough limits on East and West Pitt Streets and South Richard and East Penn Streets, and at the corners of Pitt and Richard and Pitt and Juliana Streets.

The matter of paving a portion of Juliana Street was held over until the next meeting. The Burgess was directed to purchase license tags for hackmen, and the Water Committee directed to place a modern fire plug at the corner of Railroad Avenue and North Thomas Street.

Burgess Corle's report for June was as follows: Arrests 15, fines collected $7, licenses $9. Treasurer Davidson reported amount received during June, $555.50; paid out $581.01. Balance in treasury: borough fund $133.98, water fund $1,045.53.

Burgess Corle recommended the passing of an ordinance prohibiting the sale of firecrackers, torpedoes, and other explosives generally used on the Fourth of July, within the borough. The matter will be taken up at the next meeting.

LOUIS J. MacGREGOR

Former Editor of Hyndman Bulletin Died in Carlisle.

After an illness of 10 weeks Louis J. MacGregor, formerly principal of the Hyndman schools and editor of the Hyndman Bulletin, died at his home in Carlisle Saturday morning, July 2, of Leucæmia, aged 50 years, five months and 15 days.

Mr. MacGregor was born in West St. Clair Township, this county, on January 17, 1860. He passed through the common schools and at the age of 17 became the teacher of a rural school. His indomitable will and desire to advance soon placed him in the Mann's Choice schools as Principal. He gave up his profession to accept the editorship of the Hyndman Bulletin. Having served in this position for some time he returned to the profession of teaching as Vice Principal of the Hyndman schools, later becoming Principal.

Ten years ago he accepted a position in the Insurance Department of the State and after residing in Harrisburg a year and a half removed to Carlisle.

Mr. MacGregor was a member of the Methodist Church, the Masonic Fraternity, the Shield of Honor, and the Protective Home Circle. He is survived by his wife and the following children: Clarence, Thomas, Louis, Bruce and Marian. Also by two brothers and a sister: Charles, David and Mrs. J. C. Gephart, of Bedford County. Funeral services were held at the home Tuesday afternoon, July 5, at 3 o'clock and were private. Interment was made at Ashland.

A Personal Tribute

"Some twenty years ago, without realizing what its fulfillment meant, the writer entered into a compact with one of his best and truest friends that the survivor of the two should write an obituary for the other. Never was an agreement made in lighter mood nor fulfilled with heavier heart.

"From the time that Louis J. MacGregor left his father's farm and became known to the outside world, until the day that he answered the call of the Master, there was no break in the continuity of a life that commanded the respect and admiration of all who were associated with him. He was what the world calls a self-made man. That he developed those traits of character which endeared him to his friends was due to his own indomitable will and spirit of perseverance, not to encouragement received from early environment. Many were the struggles in his short life, but always cheerful, hopeful and masterful in his management of affairs, he fought them out, surmounting difficulty after difficulty.

"While editor of the Hyndman Bulletin he became active in politics and in 1895 was a candidate at the Republican nomination for the State Legislature. Although he carried the county by popular vote, the rule of election by the delegate system, which existed in those days, prevented his nomination. He was appointed by Governor Stone to a post in the Insurance Department of Pennsylvania, which he held for ten years—until his death. He was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, one of the first four members initiated into the Hyndman Lodge and also a Past Grand Master of the Shield of Honor.

"To a heart-broken wife the realization of a future reunion is consolation; to four sons and a daughter he has left a heritage more to be valued than gold—that they can remember with pride a father who was an honest, honorable, manly man."

A Correction

In our last issue we published an article stating that the Assistant Postmaster of Saxton was charged with defrauding the Government. This was an error as the man comes from Saxman, Cambria County, and not Bedford.

THE REYNOLDS RECEPTION

Republican Committeemen, Postmasters and Others Parade.

There are two aphorisms the truth of which has often been demonstrated in the experience of men—"Wonders never cease," and "History repeats itself."

Without going back of American history we are able to find accounts of two far-famed battles; the one, the "battle above the clouds," which could be heard but not seen, and the other a battle which could be seen but not heard. These were wonders.

The return of the Hon. John M. Reynolds demonstrated both; the first, in that a man with his political reputation should be selected as the candidate of a political party for Lieutenant Governor of a state the word of whose founder was accepted even by the Aborigines, while the candidate acknowledged in the presence of witnesses that he made political promises he did not intend to keep, then, looking into the eyes of the man he intended to knife, continued: "This is not a political promise but a personal pledge, made man to man, etc." and took the train for Harrisburg to break it. In this is wonder, indeed, but the Republican boss selected him for the place and he knew his man. By so doing history repeated itself, for he has selected such men at all times, when he felt safe in so doing.

The reception given the Hon. John was arranged for by local henchmen. They took up a collection to defray the expenses, hired carriages and sent out word and in they came, some of them a couple days in advance, and among those who came were the Republican Committeemen, almost to a man, Post Masters and other office holders, also a number of those who were disappointed at that session of court held early in February.

The whistle vibrating under the power of escaping steam, announced the approach of the train carrying back to Bedford with "honors thrust upon him" the man who so valiantly lost his home ward, his home town and his home county, all Republican, in a Congressional fight.

The carriages and autos were lined up and the assembled throng being comfortably seated, accompanied by two bands, the procession started for the Court House.

When the parading host, bands and all, assembled in the auditorium of the Court House there was "room to spare." Here Mr. Reynolds was introduced by Senator Miller and made an address, his voice penetrating into the room in which he made his notorious "personal pledge." Addresses were also made by Attorneys Hicks and Woodcock, of Blair, for that county, too, had notice.

The procession was orderly and looked well, having in the carriages, just enough of "color" to produce a variegated effect.

Those on the sidewalks deserve credit for maintaining a dignified silence as the distinguished gentleman passed, tipping his hat and bowing. The awful silence might have led strangers to ask, "Who's dead," assuming it to be some great military hero, had it not been for the drums, which were not muffled.

Roland-Snyder

The home of Ex-Commissioner Baltzer Snyder at Chapman's Run was the scene of a pretty but quiet wedding on Wednesday, June 29, when their daughter, Miss Nellie, became the bride of Rev. E. Victor Roland. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. G. Shifer of Bloomsburg, Cumberland County. They were attended by Miss Ethel Snyder and Edgar E. Snyder.

The bride has been a teacher in the schools of this county for several years, residing at this place for some time. The groom is a recent graduate of the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Gettysburg and is now pastor of the Church of the Redeemer at Harrisburg. The Gazette joins in the congratulations and wishes Rev. Roland success in his new home.

Household Notes

Honeycuckle perfume is a most effective relief for the pest of houseflies.

When making hot starch add a tablespoonful of sugar. This will give a good gloss and the starched articles will retain the stiffness longer than usual.

The creaking of a door can be stopped by rubbing the hinge with a little soap or lard. If the door sticks, soap rubbed on the place where it binds will allow it to shut easily.

Do not throw away withered lettuce. Wash in cold water, put in a covered dish over night and it will be more crisp and tender than when taken from the garden.

A hot iron and blotting paper will remove grease from wallpaper.

Kerosene will remove grease from porcelain-lined sinks.

After cleaning ivory, expose to the sun. This assists in bleaching.

A reliable relief for a mosquito bite is the cut side of a raw onion.

Chicken salad is delicious if mixed with small pieces of green pepper and mayonnaise. Press the meat into pepper cases.

Boiling oil is spread by water. To extinguish it throw down flour, sand or earth. The idea is to prevent the oil spreading.

A cloth wrung out of hot vinegar and water and laid on the forehead as hot as can be borne will relieve a headache.

Woolen blankets should be placed in boxes lined with newspapers. Lay pieces of linen saturated with turpentine in the boxes to prevent an invasion of moths.

If a food cutter is used to chop raisins, figs, or dates, first squeeze into the chopper a few drops of lemon juice. Then the fruit will not clog the machine.

After roasting a piece of meat that is to be served cold, wrap it in a piece of cheesecloth while it is still hot. It will prevent it from drying out or losing flavor.

Dough made without baking powder can be kept in a cold place for several days, and many good cooks declare that it makes the bread infinitely lighter.

Cure backache and urinary ills. Good proof in the following statement.

Jesse Sturtz, First Ave., Hyndman, Pa., says: "I can say that I was greatly benefited by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Rheumatism and pains in the small of my back caused me a great deal of suffering and it was not until I commenced taking Doan's Kidney Pills that I was relieved. During the past two years I have used this remedy occasionally and it has always brought prompt and satisfactory relief from kidney disorders. In October 1907 my wife told of my experience in a public statement and I now confirm all she then said in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills. You are at liberty to use my name as one who recommends this remedy from personal experience."

THE FUTURE

It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding-place. It cannot be that our life is a bubble cast up by the ocean of eternity to float a moment upon its waves and sink into nothingness. Else, why is it the high and glorious aspirations which leap like angels from the temple of our hearts are forever wandering unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and cloud come over us with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass on to leave us to muse on their loveliness? Why is it that the stars which "hold their festival around the midnight throne" are set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And finally, why is it that the bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view and taken from us, leaving the thousand streams of our affections to flow back in an Alpine torrent upon our hearts? We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth. There is a realm where the rainbow never fades, where the stars will be spread out before us like the islands that slumber on the ocean, and where the beautiful beings which pass before us like shadows will stay forever in our presence.—George D. Prentice.

MUST BE ABOVE SUSPICION

Kidney and bladder ailments are so serious in their consequences, and if unchecked so often fatal that any remedy offered for their cure must be above suspicion. Foley Kidney Pills contain no harmful drugs, and have successfully stood a long and thorough test. Ed. D. Heckerman.

THE TRUE GENTLEMAN

Everybody has read Cardinal Newman's definition of a gentleman. The Detroit Free Press tells us what constitutes a true gentleman.

Life is so complex, its machinery so intricate, that it is impossible that the wheels should always move slowly and without friction. There is a continual straining of every nerve to gain and keep a place in this overcrowded, busy world. What wonder if, in the hurry and pushing, the rights of others are trampled or completely ignored, when every individual is in such haste that time fails for the "small, sweet courtesies of life?"

But it is the little offices of friendship—the encouraging smile, the appreciative word, the thought for our preferences, the avoidance of our prejudices—which make life easier, and which lessen in a marvelous degree all its worries and perplexities. For nothing prevents friction so perfectly as the exercise of what we sometimes disdainfully call the minor virtues; as though one should be endowed with truth, and yet, lacking prudence and delicate insight and circumspection, wound with sharp needle pricks the sensitive hearer. We do not care to be constantly reminded of our failings.

A gentleman never fails in the small, sweet courtesies. Instinctively she respects the feelings of others, and, having the golden rule by heart, it is from her heart that all lovely, love-compelling graces flow. "In her tongue is the law of kindness," and she has the ready tact which takes advantage of every opportunity to render the lives of others happier.

And every morning, with "good-day," makes each day good.

Her winning smiles and gentle ministrations, her soft voice and unfailing sympathy, ensure her always a ready welcome, and, like the sun, she "finds the world bright because she first makes it so."

"Foley Kidney Pills Have Cured Me"

The above is a quotation from a letter written by H. M. Winkler, Evansville, Ind. "I contracted a severe case of kidney trouble. My back gave out and pained me. I seemed to have lost all strength and ambition; was bothered with dizzy spells, my head would swim and specks float before my eyes. I took Foley Kidney Pills regularly and am now perfectly well and feel like a new man. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me." Ed. D. Heckerman

Gum and Sweet Juices on Stone Fruits

A request for information as to the wax-like gum which appears on peaches, and the assembling of ants at the ends of the twigs of cherry trees, was answered by Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pennsylvania, as follows:

"The appearance of wax-like drops, like gum on peaches, is caused by the Curculio, of which there are two species. However, they may be caused, also, by anything that punctures the skin. Of course, the Curculio is the greatest offender. It is to be prevented by spraying with one or two pounds of arsenate of lead in half strength Bordeaux mixture, the latter being made by using one and one-half pounds of bluestone, and three pounds of lime, in fifty gallons of water.

"The ants, as a rule, do not injure cherry twigs. They are probably licking up the sweet juices which are to be found there. Oftentimes, when ants are seen going up and down trees, they are visiting insects, such as scale insects and plant lice, that are to be seen on leaf or bark. The ants themselves do not inflict the injury, but they indicate the presence of insects which are injurious. Thus the real culprits injuring your cherry trees are plant lice, which are found beneath the leaves, and which give out a sweet liquid called honey dew, upon which the ants feed. It is this honey dew which is sticky and gummy and soils the leaves. To prevent it and prevent injury by plant lice, you should spray with one pound of Whale Oil Soap in four or five gallons of water before the leaves curl, and shortly after they come from the buds. This is the proper time of year to spray. It is too late to spray after the leaves curl, as the Aphids cannot then be reached."

MANY A DAY IS SPOILED

By a cough which cannot be broken by ordinary remedies. But why not try a medicine that will cure any cough that any medicine can cure? That is Kemp's Balsam. It is recommended by doctors and nurses, and it costs only 25 cents at any druggist's or dealer's. Keep a bottle always in the house and you will always be prepared to treat a cold or cough before it causes any suffering at all.

The Meanest Ever

The meanest trick ever perpetrated upon a lover was that which the girl's father sprang upon an Arlington Heights youth who stayed longer than the old man's stock of patience could last. He finally appeared at the head of the stairs and began to sing "The Morning Light is Breaking; the Darkness Disappears."

How the Mongoose Killed the Puff Adder

Tarleton, by the way, told me an interesting anecdote of a white-tailed mongoose and a snake. One day they brought in a rather small puff adder, less than two feet long, put it on the floor, and showed it to the mongoose. Instantly the latter sprang toward the snake, every hair in its body and tail on end, and halted five feet away, while the snake lay in curves like the thong of a whip, its head turned toward the mongoose. Both were motionless for a moment. Then, suddenly, the mongoose seemed to lose all its excitement; its hair smoothed down, and it trotted quietly up to the snake, seized it by the middle of the back—it always devoured its food with a savage voracity—and settled comfortably down to its meal. Like lightning the snake's head whipped round. It drove its fangs deep into the snout or lip of the mongoose, hung on for a moment, and then repeated the blow. The mongoose paid not the least attention, but went on munching the snake's body, severed its backbone at once, and then ate it all up, head, fangs, poison, and everything; and it never showed a sign of having received any damage in the encounter. I had always understood that the mongoose owed its safety to its agility in avoiding the snake's stroke, and I can offer no explanation of this particular incident.—From "African Game Trails," by Theodore Roosevelt, in the July Scribner.

Catarrh Can Quickly Be Cured

A bottle of Hyomei, a hard rubber pocket inhaler, that will last a lifetime, and simple instructions for curing catarrh make a Hyomei outfit. Into the inhaler you pour a few drops of magical Hyomei (pronounce it High-o-mei). This is absorbed by the antiseptic gauze within and now you are ready to breathe it over the germ infested membrane where it will speedily begin its work of killing catarrh germs. Hyomei is made of Australian eucalyptol combined with other antiseptics and is very pleasant to breathe. It is guaranteed to cure catarrh, bronchitis, sore throat, croup, coughs and colds, or money back. It cleans out a stuffed up head in a few minutes.

Sold by druggists everywhere, and by F. W. Jordan. Complete outfit $1.00. And remember that extra bottles if afterwards needed cost only 50 cents. Breathe it, that's all.

To break up cold in head or chest in a few minutes, pour a teaspoonful of Hyomei into a bowl of boiling water, cover head and bowl with towel and breathe the vapor.

O. Henry's Last Story

"The Friendly Call" is the title of the last story written by O. Henry, the famous novelist who died a few weeks ago, and it is said to be one of his best. It will be published next Sunday in the Monthly Magazine, which is free with The Pittsburgh Dispatch. The magazine contains a number of other good stories by writers who have made such periodicals as Collier's, Scribner's, the Saturday Evening Post, etc. The magazine itself resembles the Saturday Evening Post and surpasses by far any other Sunday newspaper magazine. It is issued on the second Sunday of each month and is free to all readers of The Sunday Dispatch. If you got the first issue on June 12 you will be sure to get it next Sunday. If you did not get the first issue don't fail to get this one and you'll be sure to get them all hereafter. The Sunday Dispatch, with the handsome monthly free, will be the great bargain next Sunday. Value of Confidence

The proverb has it that a man's character is no better than his creed; the dwarf is without a creed and longs for none. It is the pushing man who boasts of a creed and convictions along with it. The man who has full confidence in himself seldom comes out at the short end of the horn in the battle of life.

RECIPES

Bisque Ice Cream

Two cupfuls of milk, one quart of cream, half a cupful of stale sponge cake crumbs, one and a half cupfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of almond extract, half a cupful of chopped nuts, one teaspoonful of caramel, grated rind of one lemon. Put the milk into a double boiler, and sugar and lemon rind and stir until hot. When cool add almond extract, caramel and cream. Freeze until quite stiff, then add cake crumbs and nuts. Repack for one hour.

Cherry Pie

While sour cherries make far and away the best pie, the sweet cherries are not to be despised. They are usually pitted, though many people like the flavor imparted by the stones. This is, therefore, a matter of option. A deep tin should be used for cherry pie, the deeper the better. When the under crust is spread on the plate, sprinkle lightly with flour or brush over with white of egg. This last the Germans always do in making fruit pies. Pack full of the cherries sweetened to taste, dredge a little flour over the top, then put on the upper crust and seal.—Delineator.

Virginia Sweet Pickle

Mix together two quarts each sliced cucumbers, onions and green tomatoes, two quarts butter beans that have been cooked 15 minutes, and two quarts chopped cabbage. Add one-third cup salt and one pint vinegar and scald for five minutes. Add eight cupfuls sugar. Then mix three-fourths of an ounce turmeric with a cupful of flour, and one-half ounce celery seed. Add a half pint vinegar and stir until it thickens.

CHILDREN'S HAIR

Keep it Clean and Free From Disease by Using Parisian Sage

If you want your children to grow up with strong, sturdy and vigorous hair, teach them to use Parisian Sage; the world renowned Hair Tonic.

It is positively the most delightful, invigorating hair dressing on the market. It is not sticky or greasy and will make the coarsest hair soft, lustrous and luxuriant. Get a 50c bottle from F. W. Jordan and watch how rapid its action.

HIDDEN TREASURES

The human heart has hidden treasures

In secret kept, in silence sealed; The thoughts, the hopes, the dreams, the pleasures, Whose charms were broken if revealed.

And days may pass in dull confusion, And nights be noisy routs may fly, While, lost in fame's or wealth's illusion, The memory of the past may die.

But there are hours of lonely musing, Such as in evening silence come, When soft as birds their pinions closing, The heart's best feelings gather home.

Then, in our souls there seems to languish

A tender grief that is not woe; And thoughts that once wrung groans of anguish,

Now cause some gentle tears to flow

And feelings once as strong as passions,

Float softly back—a faded dream, Our own sharp griefs and wild sensations

The taste of others' suffering seem; Oh, when the heart is freshly bleeding,

How it longs for that time to be, When through the mists of years receding,

Its woes live but in reverie!

And it can dwell on moonlight glimmer,

On evening shades and loneliness, And while the sky grows dim and dimmer,

Heed no unmeasured woe's distress— Only a deeper impress given

By a lonely hour and darkened room, To solemn thoughts that soar to heaven,

Seeking a life and world to come. —Exchange

COMFORT FOR SHUT-INS

Money Badly Needed to Carry on Summer Work of Society.

Contributions for the summer work of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Shut-In Society are sorely needed. If the work is to be continued to any extent. Invalids are the special charge of the society, which has over 700 such members to look after. Of this number many belong among the very poor, and their lives of confinement are spent within the walls of small, unsanitary houses, where the hot weather brings extra discomforts. To such people the Shut-In Society manages to bring relief in the summer by affording outings to the country or seashore.

According to the need these outings are brief or extended over several weeks. This year one of the cases to benefit by the outing fund is that of a woman, crippled and tortured by a rheumatic disease, who is to be sent to the seashore for two weeks. This is the first time in eight years that she has left her room. From the same section of the city a young woman who has been ill for four years and confined to her bed for much of that time, will also be sent to the shore for two weeks.

Many Shut-Ins are helped during the summer by the loan of a wheelchair. By its use invalids who have not for years before been out of the house are wheeled daily by some members of their family to near-by open squares and parks. A wheelchair costs $25, and a two weeks' outing from $10 to $12. Smaller sums will provide briefer periods for others.

Many deserving cases are on the books of the society, and anyone desiring to contribute for an individual need can learn about them by applying to the president of the branch, Miss Mary Parker Nicholson, at No. 1710 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, to whom checks for the wheelchair or outing fund may also be sent.

Nervous Feminine Feet

"Many women have nervous feet," said a dealer in women's shoes in a large department store recently. "I have been selling shoes for the greater part of my life and I have made a study of how the shoes affect the mind and the body. I have studied the structure of the foot. My experiences have convinced me that many women have unusually sensitive feet. I call them nervous feet. If they do not get a shoe that fits them properly, their entire nervous system is affected. Such women often spend money on doctor's bills when all they really need is a pair of shoes that fits them. Sometimes the pressure of the shoe on a narrow instep will make trouble for a woman, irritating her to an extreme extent. Again, the shoe may not pinch at any particular place, but so affect all the nerves of the feet as to wear out the entire nervous system. I am convinced that if women would give more care to getting a proper fit in their shoes rather than looking for high heels they would be much happier."

What Canada Buys From U. S.

In ten years, 1900 to 1909, inclusive, Canada's purchases of the United States grew from $109,208,000 to $182,690,000, an increase of $73,482,000. The increase was chiefly in metals and minerals, fruits, furs, fibres, gutta percha goods, hats and caps, boots and shoes, oils, paper and paper goods, provisions, seeds, settler's effects, tobacco and its manufactures, and wood and its manufactures. In the same ten years Canadian exports to the United States grew from $60,000,000 to $91,000,000, a gain of $31,000,000. Of the sum $23,000,000 was in metals and minerals and wood and its manufactures.

Ants on Root of Asters
A Philadelphia florist wrote to State Zoologist H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, requesting information as to what to do to get rid of red ants that he finds on the roots of his Asters. In describing the operations of the ants, he wrote: "They seem to attack the roots of the Asters by means of a white Aphid. The Aphid sucks the life out of the plant, and the ants live on the Aphid."

Professor Surface answered this letter as follows:

"This Aphid or Root Louse gives forth a sweet secretion or excretion, called honey dew, upon which the ants feed. If the Plant Lice are killed, the ants will disappear from that place; or the ants' nest can be destroyed, using tobacco dust in abundance around the roots of the plants to be protected; or make a hole in the soil near the roots of the plants and put in a little carbon bisulphide and close the hole. The carbon bisulphide fumes will kill the pests, while the tobacco dust will fertilize the plants and also repel the pests. Wood ashes will also repel them, as proven by us in personal experiments for Aphids on roots of pear trees."

THE MONTENEGRIN.

He is Hospitable, but Dearly Loves the Vendetta.

To listen to a Bulgar singing is to make one's flesh creep or want to weep. The centuries of cruel oppression are only too manifest in Bulgarian music and words. But a Montenegrin grows restless over his songs and curses the powers that forbid him to emulate his forefathers' deeds en masse across the frontier. He does so whenever he can, but only in twos and threes.

When the Montenegrin goes raiding across the border it is really a more sporting affair than the well equipped and organized outings of the Bulgar "Comitatus." With him it is usually a private act of revenge or vendetta to which he invites one or two friends. Then they steal across the border at night, and their man, do their best to kill him and then make tracks homeward with the whole district at their heels. Perhaps the method of killing is not up to the standard of western sport, for they shoot their victim "sitting," so to speak, and do not give him a chance, but as it is the recognized system on both sides little can be said.

This custom makes men very wary, and the stranger can appreciate the reason when he sees a plowman, for instance, attending to his duties with a rifle slung over his back. But in spite of this they are the essence of honor and hospitality. As their guest no one can come to any harm, and they will do all in their power to make his stay among them pleasant and safe.—Wide World Magazine.

PAVE JULIANA STREET

The effort of Councilman White to get the property holders along Juliana Street from Pitt to the Monument to pave the street is commendable.

That the principal streets of Bedford should be paved no one will question. It cannot all be done in one year nor in five years, but it can be done and the sooner a start is made the better, and there is no better place to start than on the section of Juliana Street indicated.

The paving of the streets of the town will necessarily improve the grading and remove the dust to a great extent, thus removing a source of annoyance and discomfort and bettering the health conditions of the town. Let everybody lend a hand.

THE EFFECT OF THE FIGHT

The Gazette is not in favor of pugilistic encounters but so long as they are permitted it is our duty to give the news and give it while warm, hence our arrangement for telegraphic account by rounds.

The effect of the Jeffries-Johnson encounter at Reno is far-reaching and most detrimental to the peace of the nation in that it has increased the tendency to race riots. In half a hundred places there have been fights and riots as a result of the fight between men of two races. The fight should never have been permitted.

Prize fighting at best and between either white or colored men is brutal—a relic of past ages—and should be ended; but when the contesting parties represent different races there is all the more reason for their prohibition because of the effect upon the country. The fact that moving pictures representing the fight have been prohibited in many cities is an evidence of the fact that the authorities fear race troubles more extensive than those that followed the telegraphic reports of the battle.

The result of this fight cannot yet be measured. A stop should be put to the whole business.

MISS AMOS WINS AGAIN

Federal Court Declines to Take Jurisdiction in Damage Suit.

Miss Jennie Amos won another victory Wednesday in her long legal battle to recover damages from the Delaware River Ferry Company for personal injuries. Judge McPherson, in the United States District Court, dismissed the petition of the corporation for a limitation of its liability, and also refused to take jurisdiction and have the case heard in the Admiralty Court.

Miss Amos had her foot crushed while getting off a ferryboat and the accident has left her a helpless cripple. She sued the company in the Common Pleas Court and was awarded $10,000 damages. A new trial was granted, and the second time she was awarded $8,000. This was confirmed by the Supreme Court, and then counsel for the company made the attempt to have the Federal Court intervene, on the ground that it was a case for the Admiralty Court.

The court, in order to give the company the right to appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, dismisses the entire case. Judge McPherson says that by speedily taking an appeal the mooted question as to whether or not the District Court can limit the liability will be finally settled. The attorney for the defendant company said an appeal will be taken immediately.

Miss Amos is a former Bedford girl and a sister of Miss Annie Amos and Mrs. William Snell, Jr.

JEFFRIES WHIPPED

Crowd Before Board of Trade Rooms Hears Gazette Telegrams.

As announced last week, The Gazette received telegrams by rounds of the great pugilistic struggle between Jeffries and Johnson as the fight progressed at Reno. Our time being three hours later than that of Reno it was about 6 o'clock when the first message was announced by megaphone from the window of the Board of Trade rooms to a considerable crowd which had assembled on Juliana Street to receive the news. The telegrams tell the story and read as follows:

Reno, 2:10.

Bedford Gazette:—Weather fine in Reno. Jeffries accompanied by trainers first to reach big arena; Johnson in new touring car followed soon after. Statement by each just before going into final conference with trainers was: "I am going to win this fight." Ten dollar seats raised to $25 at last moment; none cheaper, and rioting results.

Reno, 2:15.

The fight has not yet started on account of picture machines being in the road of spectators who threaten to tear them down.

Reno, 2:30.

Jeffries has just entered the ring. Great cheering.

Fight delayed by unaccountable slowness of Jeffries and agitation about increased prices. Johnson finally agrees to 60 and 40 per cent. division, but demands additional $20,000 bonus.

Reno, 2:35.

Johnson was first to enter the ring and took the southeast corner. Jeffries took the northeast corner, giving Jeffries position with sun at his back. Jeffries wore blue trunks with American flag as belt.

Reno, 2:48.

The ring ordered cleared, the fighters introduced and at 2:46 the great fight started without a hand shake.

First Round—Johnson landed a light blow to the face and Jeff countered with a left hook to jaw. Round ended with honors even.

Round 4—Telegram missing.

Round 5—So far Jeffries has best of fight. In a clinch Jeff landed two uppercuts and brought blood again.

Round 6—Johnson's round; landed several blows that counted.

Round 7—Johnson with a left hook to nose draws first blood from Jeffries. Both men fighting easy.

Round 8—Jeff rushes; Johnson said, "Come right in." Jeff went in and landed to the stomach. Johnson countered with an uppercut which went several inches away from Jeff's head. Round ended a clinch.

Round 9—Opened in a clinch with Jeff landing on the body. No damage; no hard fighting. Referee nothing to do but walk around ring and break clinches.

Round 10—After light sparring Jeff landed several light blows and clinches followed. Jeff landed heavy ones, and while both were bleeding, Johnson, in a clinch, smiled and winked over Jeff's shoulder as the gong sounded.

Round 11—Johnson scores four times in opening; Jeff is spitting blood; Johnson lands on face; Jeffries seems dazed.

Round 12—Light sparring; Johnson jollying Jeff; Johnson landing heavy on Jeffries. Jeffries bleeding about face and Johnson in splendid shape.

Round 13—Clinch at the start; Johnson lands to head in the clinch; Johnson lands two to Jeff's damaged mouth. Repeats the same blows; Jeffries apparently unable to use his arms. Johnson's round.

Round 14—Fast fighting with Johnson aggressive.

In the 15th round Johnson had Jeffries down for the count of nine. When Jeffries got up Johnson went after him beating the life out of him; smashing blows landed in such quick succession that Jeffries was unable to recover; after a minute Sam Berger, who saw the condition of Jeffries, threw up the sponge to save a knockout.

Bargain Hunters' Paint

Here's a paint that's being sold to bargain-hunters:

10 per cent lead
50 " " zinc
20 " " barytes
20 " " whiting

Barytes and whiting are sand and whitewash, not paint.

Some people must like gold bricks. The name of that paint is "pure lead-and-zinc." The dealer who sells it says it's as good as Devoe.

Orders Grave Opened

Miss Mary Pitcairn, widow of the former millionaire tailor, Albert Pitcairn, on Tuesday ordered that the body of her husband, which had been interred at New Paris, be disinterred. She declares she will take the body into the Orphans' Court at Pittsburgh to prove she obeyed court orders.

Before his death Mrs. Pitcairn was given charge of her husband, who, it was alleged, was insane. The Allegheny County courts ordered that she keep him within the jurisdiction of Allegheny County. Just before his death she took him to New Paris for his health, and he was buried there. Now there is a contest over his will, and Mrs. Pitcairn proposes to show the court she had no intention of disobeying the court order permanently.

RUSSELL SHERMAN.

He Was an Excellent Scholar, but Not Especially Manly.

By OLIVE EDNA MAY.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

Russell Sherman led his class at the normal school. He was a hardworking student, spending all his surplus time in odd jobs by which he could pay his way while obtaining an education. He roomed alone, having no intimate associates and taking no part in the athletic games of his fellow students. "I like Sherman," said Tom Blake, one of the students, "but he's almost too delicately organized for a boy and has all the sensitiveness of a girl. I caught him crying one day when some one said something to him to hurt his feelings. Think of a fellow fifteen years old crying!"

One day Blake while walking across the campus saw Sherman shrinking away from Jim Potter, a bigger boy.

THIS TIME IT WAS A CAKE.

who was following him up with clinched fists. Tom hurried on and heard Potter hiss between his teeth: "Sissy!"

"What's the matter between you two?" asked Blake.

"None of your business," said Potter.

"What is it, Russell?"

"He sits next me in mathematics and wanted me to pony him this morning at recitation. I couldn't. The teacher was looking straight at us."

"You lie," said Potter.

"Russell, instead of answering the insult with a blow, shrank back. His face was scarlet and his eyes were wet."

"I wouldn't stand that if I were you, Russell," said Blake. "It's better to get thrashed than to take the lie."

"I don't want to fight any one," replied Russell in a trembling voice. "I only want to be let alone."

"Well, take that for a parting gift," said Potter, and he slapped Sherman's face.

Blake, who had been curbing his indignation, could no longer stand this bullying of the strong over the weak. Making a rush for Potter, he tried to strike him, but Potter was too quick for him and, avoiding the blow, planted its mate on his cheek. A number of boys just out from recitation saw the fracas and, running forward, surrounded the combatants.

"A ring, a ring!"

Blake and Potter stripped to the waist.

"What's it about?" asked one of the boys.

"He's fighting for Sissy Sherman," said Potter.

The eyes of all were turned toward Sherman, who was vainly endeavoring to repress tears. He started to go away; then, as if ashamed to leave a fight that was on his account, he turned back and stood on the outer edge of the circle.

The combatants were between sixteen and seventeen years old. Potter was heavier than Blake, who was rather tall and slender. Blake had the advantage of a good cause, while Potter soon learned that he was without the sympathy of the spectators. Russell Sherman, though not physically strong or manly, was respected as the head of his class, and the head of the class is class property to be treated and respected as such. Therefore Blake, who was defending Sherman, was considered to be fighting for the honor of the class. Besides this, many of the boys had been bullied by Potter, and they would be glad to see him downed.

Half a dozen rounds had been fought when Blake, just as Potter was aiming a well directed blow at him, slipped and fell. Potter fell with him and, getting his knee on him, began to hammer him with his fist, when Sherman rushed at him, seized him by the hair and pulled him over. Some of the larger boys but rered, and the combatants got up. Then, after a brief rest, they began another round.

Stories of schoolboy fights usually give a victory for one or the other of the fighters, but in most cases they continue till both are tired out. Such was the case in the battle between Blake and Potter. About the time the spectators were thinking of stopping the fight, a teacher was seen in the distance coming toward the scene of the struggle, and in another minute not a boy was to be seen on the campus.

After this Russell Sherman kept to himself more than ever, if that could be. He had the respect of his fellow students in everything except pluck. He was not considered manly—that is, so far as fighting his way was concerned—but with the decline of the old military spirit that for centuries gave first place to the strongest and bravest respect for brute strength has dwindled. Sherman had brains, and the pre-eminence of brains over muscle is fully recognized in the twentieth century. But he possessed a certain kind of pluck that no other boy in the school displayed. He was the only boy there who was earning his own education.

The day after the fight Tom Blake saw Russell Sherman coming across the campus toward him, but Sherman when he reached a fork in the cement walk turned aside, going in another direction. Blake saw plainly that the boy he had fought for shrank from meeting him. At first he didn't like this action on the part of his protegee. He thought that Sherman should have come up to him frankly and thanked him for standing by him so far as to fight for him. But Blake was a thinking sort of a boy, and it occurred to him that if the tables were turned, if some boy bigger and stronger than he had fought for him, how would he feel toward that other boy? He could not quite put himself in such a position, for he had good strength for his age and was not fearful. Nevertheless he could excuse Sherman on the ground that he had needed protection from a bigger boy, had secured it and would naturally feel demeaned by accepting it.

Blake went on to his room and, glancing at his study table, saw something on it, flat and round, wrapped in white paper. Taking off the cover, he came to some oil paper, which contained something soft. Removing this wrapper, he uncovered a pie.

"By Jove!" he exclaimed. "I wonder how that came here."

He ate half the pie, then bethought himself who had left it there. Numerous inquiries failed to elicit the donor. He racked his brains to discover what friend he had that would thus favor him, but could not think of any one. One person occurred to him as the possible giver—that was Russell Sherman. But the pie had been tied up with a very narrow blue silk ribbon instead of a string, the ends being tied in a bow. Blake knew that no boy would ever tie up anything with a bow. No; some of his aunts, sisters or cousins must have sent it to him.

He thought that when he met Sherman again he would say something to make him feel easier about his position. He found an opportunity one day when coming out of recitation.

"Hello, Russell!" he said.

"Hello, Blake!" was the reply.

"Going to win the valedictory?"

"I don't know."

"I hope you will."

"Why?"

"Oh, I think you're a pretty good sort of a fellow!"

"I don't believe you respect me much."

"Yes, I do. Why do you think I don't?"

"Oh, I don't fight my own battles!"

"You would with boys of your size."

"I haven't had a chance before this to thank you for that fight you had with Potter. It was mighty good of you."

Blake felt Russell's hand feeling for his and saw a pair of grateful eyes turned upon him. Thinking the affair was getting mawkish, he made pretense of wishing to catch up with another boy and ran away. When he went to his room to prepare for supper he saw another gift on his table. This time it was a cake.

Again Blake questioned the maids and others in the house, but no one could, or, rather, would, tell him who had left the gift.

Meanwhile Russell Sherman was distinguishing himself in his classes, continually gaining honors.

Graduation day came, and the boys made their speeches. Last came Sherman with the valedictory. He had fulfilled the expectations of his teachers, his standing being higher than had ever been reached in the school before. As soon as he started to speak persons in the audience began to whisper to each other: "How young he is! His voice hasn't even changed." The boy acquitted himself well and received more enthusiastic congratulations than are usual on such occasions. The world admires strength, but loves weakness.

The graduating class separated, some to go the next autumn to college, others into business. During the summer Tom Blake went to a farmhouse where boarders were taken. On ascending the steps he saw a girl in a white dress dart into the house. He thought nothing of this, however, till supper time, when he saw the same girl sitting at an opposite table and trying to hide her face from him. After supper he met her in the hall. He stopped her and asked:

"I beg pardon. Aren't you a sister of Russell Sherman?"

"I am Russell Sherman."

And then it came out that Edith Russell Sherman, having been denied admission to the normal school, had donned boy's apparel and entered as a boy. As soon as she had been graduated she returned to the dress of her own sex.

Tom Blake and Edith Sherman are now studying at a co-ed college. It looks as if they would study in proximity for the rest of their lives.

Complexion Veils to Hide Summer Tan—Revival of Pique.

Complexion veils with an underneath of white tulle are becoming fashionable.

The newest auto veils are luxurious accessories. They are very large, but so soft that an entire veil may be crushed in the palm of the hand. The changeable or shot effects are much favored. These veils are hemmed on all sides with chiffon cloth in a solid color to match a tone in the veil.

Pique makes some very charming dresses this summer. In a collection of Paris models was seen a frock of buff pique in soft finish, trimmed with broad strappings of the material elaborately braided with narrow soutache.

The girl's dress that is simple, yet trimmed so as to give a dainty effect, is sure to be liked, and this model consists of a plain blouse and skirt with banding applied on indicated lines.

Ball Game at Rainsburg

Last Saturday at Rainsburg the Woltburg baseball team defeated the home team in a one-sided battle, the score being 8 to 0. Our boys started in from the very first and pocketed the game in the third inning.

Clyde Diehl pitched a fairly good game but they could not connect with the wonderful curves and speed of Whetstone, who gave them only three hits.

The features of the game were a foul catch made by O. Whetstone and Second Baseman Smith's batting, notwithstanding this is the first year for this youngster in the big team. Shortstop Diehl also played a brilliant game.

Our boys were loathe to learn that Mr. Byers is not on the Rainsburg team this year, but all the baseball boys extend congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Byers.

Defiance

July 8—The Fourth is over and so far as we know no one was hurt. The writer did not see one "drunk" during the Fourth, which would have been almost an impossibility with two open saloons in our town.

Dr. L. R. Tryon had a fine and varied display of fireworks, very much to the delight of the children. Mr. Wentworth sent up a good-sized balloon.

Some heartless wretch poisoned four or five good dogs one night last week for several persons living between Defiance and Coal Dale, Borough. It is supposed that it was the work of a chicken thief who wanted to get rid of the dogs so he would have less trouble getting at the chickens. He may, however, find something worse than dogs, should he make bold enough to visit the hen coops of any of these neighbors.

Prayer Meeting in the Commons.

For many years a prayer meeting has been held in the house of commons once a week during every parliamentary session. No one knows who originated the idea, but the records of the proceedings, which are faithfully noted each week, show that in the year 1833 the well known Quaker Mr. T. Fowell Buxton and the evangelicals Sir George Grey and Mr. Zachary Macaulay were in constant attendance. The prayer meeting is held in a room granted for the purpose by the sergeant-at-arms and is restricted to twenty minutes. The proceedings are very simple. At each weekly meeting a president for the following week is chosen. On the day of assembling—Tuesday, at 5 o'clock—the president for the day opens the meeting, reads a portion of the Scriptures and either offers an extempore prayer or calls on one of the members to pray. Two or three others offer short prayers, and the meeting closes with the benediction.—London News.

He Begs Pardon No More.

Jones had just trod on the toe of an old gentleman while getting into the tram car.

"I beg your pardon," he said.

"Hey? Speak louder. I'm a trifle deaf."

"I beg your pardon," repeated Jones.

"H'm! Peggy starving? Well, I'm sorry. Who's Peggy?"

Jones was red in the face now.

"You misunderstand, sir!" he shouted.

"Hey?"

"You misunderstood!"

"Miss Underwood, is she? Peggy, who is starving, is Miss Underwood? Well?"

"I didn't say anything about Miss Underwood!" screamed Jones. "I begged your pardon, and you misunderstood!"

"Oh, now I see!" said the old man sympathetically. "It is your Aunt Peggy who is starving Miss Underwood. Well, why don't you report the case to the police?"—Pearson's.

Not in Her Class.

While delivering an address at a woman's club an actress told the story of a young woman prominent in New York society who desired to achieve histrionic honors.

The manager to whom she confided her desire pointed out the inadvisability of the step she contemplated and added that even were she disposed to give her the chance she coveted he would still be in doubt whether her talents were such as to justify such action on his part.

"What is particularly desired by us at the present time," he said, "is the service of people who know the mechanics of the stage."

"Merciful heavens!" exclaimed the young woman, throwing up her hands. "You don't mean to tell me that it is necessary I should be on terms of intimacy with those dreadful stage hands?"—Lippincott's.

Proud of His Prospects.

Louis Pierre was one of a number of Canadian immigrants who settled at Fitzgerald, Ga. As he spoke both French and English he rapidly became a man of importance and was successively elected to the offices of city marshal, coroner and justice of the peace. A dispute arose between the French and English settlers as to the superiority of the United States over the Canadian provinces. They finally agreed to leave the decision to Judge Pierre, who handed down this decision:

"Voost tage a loog at me. First day magge me constabul, den coroner, and now joostis of de pees. Soon I be ze gouvernair, den senator, den president. I would be ze loog time in Caladairie fore day magge me queen."—Circle Magazine.

A Diet of Wild Honey.

Wild honey as a change is an agreeable sweetmeat, but after a few days constantly partaking of it the European palate rejects it as nauseous and almost disgusting. On experience extended over a fortnight during which period our food consisted solely of it and maize. It has escaped the Biblical commentators that one of the principal hardships that John the Baptist must have undergone was his diet of wild honey.—Geographic Magazine.

WAS HE A SPOOK?

By EDWIN T. GARRISON

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

Some students were disputing. One of the party declared that the physical research societies would one day prove that spiritual bodies revisited their former haunts. In support of his belief he told the following story:

Elbert Ellison was a prodigy at school, carried off all the prizes in college, could declaim in almost any language, was the best shot, swordsman, whist and chess player, artist, musician, that the sun ever shone upon. As for loveliness, no woman could resist him.

I was a member of a small social circle in a place where Ellison spent some time. It appeared like a vision. In a very brief period he had captured every one of us, young men and young women alike. He came on the 1st of June, and on the 2d, by his expertness in the water, saved two girls and a man from drowning. On the 3d he won the championship of tennis; on the 4th he beat a professional billiard player. Then followed a series of feats calculated to put the bluish athletic youths of ancient Athens to shame.

By this time every girl in the place was in love with him. He was a handsome chap, with a Byron head, neck, and could write verses that judges of such matters pronounced remarkable. One Sunday when a person was ill Ellison supplied his place and preached the most remarkable sermon that was ever heard in a church.

One girl among those who fell in love with Ellison seemed to find fault in his sight. She was Lois Beverly, quiet, demure creature with dreamy eyes. She was not prominent in any of the affairs going on in the place, but was held in a sort of reverence by the others. Had it not been for her retiring disposition she would have been a belle, for she possessed beauty in repose that was very rare. Many a young fellow on seeing her thought he would fall in love with her, but when he came to talk with her was chilled. Was it want of interest in him or that she occupied a plane too far above him? It was certainly not her stupidity.

When Ellison appeared she became another person. She was often seen chatting with him with great animation, to say nothing of flashes of wit. Before long we were all watching this couple, who seemed to be the complement of each other. We agreed that it required a universal genius to awaken her dormant faculties. Every one was saying, "What a pair those two will make!"

The only difference between Ellison's bearing toward Lois Beverly and other girls was that he seemed to be intent upon fascinating her. He would when chatting with her keep his eyes fixed on hers as though pouring his soul through her orbs to mingle with her own soul behind them. At such times there was an absence of his own brilliancy. He seemed rather to be exciting hers. There was a suggestion of something plaintive both in him and in her. Many a time I have watched them when they were together, I too far to hear what they were saying, and it seemed to me that he was playing upon her as he would upon a zither.

Then one day everybody was asking, "What has become of Ellison?" Nobody knew. He certainly wasn't with us any more. Of course we all turned to Lois. All she would say was that she didn't know any more of Mr. Ellison's whereabouts than the rest of us. He didn't reappear, and Lois sank back into her former condition. The only change was a profound sadness that had settled upon her, and the dream in her eyes was intensified.

Ellison returned some time after his disappearance the woman who owned the house where he lived told me that at the time he left her she had found a drop of blood on the hearthstone in his room. I asked her if any one was with him at that time, and she said there was no one. He had gone up to bed at 10 o'clock, the house had been carefully locked—she was fearful of burglars—and no one had been in during the night. In the morning when her lodger didn't come down she went to his room. It was empty, the bed had not been slept in, and a drop of blood was on the hearth.

Lois Beverly grew frail and lived only about six months after Ellison's going. I got it into my head that the fellow was some sort of spook. At any rate, I could never trace his antecedents or his identity after he left us. One day, having nothing better to do, I wrote out an account of the case and sent it to a society for physical research.

After some weeks I received a reply from the secretary. It stated that the society had discussed the matter of Elbert Ellison, but that there was nothing in it that any one could grasp. One of the members had made a suggestion to which I was welcome. It was this: In the sixteenth century lived a Scotchman named Crichton, who was a universal genius. He spoke a dozen languages and could dispute on any subject in Latin. He excelled in all exercises and sports. While in the service of the Duke of Mantua as tutor to the duke's son he was assassinated. Ellison's accomplishments, his vanishing and the drop of blood on his hearth would seem to indicate that this man Crichton had paid the earth a visit.

A Storekeeper Says:

"A lady came into my store lately and said:

"I have been using a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove all winter in my apartment. I want one now for my summer home. I think these oil stoves are wonderful. If only women knew what a comfort they are, they would all have one. I spoke about my stove to a lot of my friends, and they were astonished. They thought that there was small and smoke from an oil stove, and that it heated a room just like any other stove. I told them of my experience, and one after another they got one, and now, not one of them would give hers up for five times its cost."

The lady who said this had thought an oil stove was all right for quickly heating milk for a baby, or boiling a kettle of water, or to make coffee quickly in the morning, but she never dreamed of using it for difficult or heavy cooking. Now—she knows.

Do you really appreciate what a New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove means to you? No more coal to carry, no more coming to the dinner table so tired out that you can't eat. Just light a New Perfection Stove and immediately the heat from an intense blue flame shoots up to the bottom of the pot, kettle or oven. But the room isn't heated. There is no smoke, no smell, no outside heat, no drudgery in the kitchen where one of these stoves is used.

Cautionary Note: Be sure you get this stove—see that the name-plate reads "New Perfection."

It has a Cabinet Top with a shelf for keeping plates and food hot. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

A Wonderful Discovery for Pimples.

It is surprising how quickly and easily pimples and black-heads can be cured with the following prescription, which was made known to the public a short time ago by a celebrated specialist on skin diseases, now retired, who used it in a long and successful practice with wonderful results. To use his own words: "There is nothing yet discovered that can compare with it for promptly removing pimples, eczema, black-heads, blotches, red face and nose, and in fact any disease of the skin; it also destroys the germ that causes the disease and makes the cure permanent." Following is the prescription, which can be prepared at any reliable Drug Store at a small cost: Glycerin one-half ounce, Ether one ounce, Alcohol seven ounces. Mix, shake well and apply to the parts affected night and morning, letting it remain on the face for ten or fifteen minutes, then it can be wiped off. Do not use any soap, use instead a little oatmeal tied up in a cheese cloth bag.

Lesson II.—Third Quarter, For July 10, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text, John vi, 63—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

At the close of the first quarter we took the Easter lesson instead of the review, so that we have had no review this year until now. We will give the lesson titles and Golden Texts of the second quarter and then endeavor to summarize the lessons of the year to date:

1.—"The Power of Faith," Matt. ix, 18-34; Golden Text, Mark ix, 23.

2.—"The Mission of the Twelve," Matt. ix, 35, to x, 13, 40-42; Golden Text, Matt. x, 8.

3.—"The Question of John the Baptist," Matt. x, 1-19; Golden Text, John v, 36.

4.—"Warning and Invitation," Matt. xi, 20-30, Golden Text, Matt. xi, 28.

5.—"Two Sabbath Incidents," Matt. xii, 1-14; Golden Text, Matt. xii, 7.

6.—"Temperance Lesson," Prov. xxiii, 20-35; Golden Text, Prov. xxiii, 32.

7.—"Growing Hatred to Jesus," Matt. xii, 22-32; Golden Text, Matt. xii, 30.

8.—"Death of John the Baptist," Matt. xiv, 1-12; Golden Text, Prov. xvi, 32.

9.—"The Multitudes Fed," Matt. xiv, 13-21; xv, 29-39; Golden Text, John vi, 35.

10.—"Jesus Walks on the Sea," Matt. xiv, 22-36; Golden Text, Matt. xiv, 33.

11.—"The Canaanitish Woman," Matt. xv, 21-28; Golden Text, Matt. xv, 28.

12.—"Parable of the Sower," Matt. xiii, 1-9, 18-23; Golden Text, Jas. i, 21.

13.—"Parable of the Tares," Matt. xiii, 24-30, 36-43; Golden Text, Matt. xiii, 43.

Third Quarter, No. 1.—"Pictures of the Kingdom," Matt. xiii, 31-33, 44-52; Golden Text, Rom. xiv, 17.

A simple outline of the book thus far would be according to chapters:

1.—The genealogy and birth of the King; 2.—The visit of the wise men and the flight into Egypt; 3.—Testimony of John the Baptist and of God the Father at the baptism; 4.—The King and the devil, the King's call to repentance and His call to the first disciples; 5.—The laws of the kingdom; 6.—The King's credentials; 7.—The mission of the twelve; 8.—The King's rejection by the people; 9.—The King's rejection by the rulers and His estimation of them; 10.—The seven parables covering the present age, or the mystery of the kingdom; 11.—John the Baptist, 5,000 fed, Jesus walking on the sea; 12.—Necessity of heart worship, the great faith of a woman, 4,000 fed.

The Old Testament is full of testimony concerning a kingdom of peace and righteousness for all nations with Israel as the center and an immortal man as King on the throne of David, as literally a kingdom on this earth as were Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome, the kingdoms of this world having become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ (Rev. xi, 15). Great violence has been done to the plain teaching of Scripture by asserting that there is no future for Israel as a nation, that the church is now the true Israel, that the kingdom of God is within us and that Christ will not have a kingdom on this earth. In reply to these four false and unscriptural assertions see Jer. xxxiii. Note that He said God's kingdom is among you or in the midst of you (not within you), for He was speaking to unbelievers who were ready to kill Him (Luke xvii, 20, 21, margin), and as to His saying "My kingdom is not of this world" (John xviii, 20), see in the same verse His explanation in the words, "My kingdom is not from hence." Believers are born from above and are not of the world, but they are in the world, so His kingdom will be on the earth, but not by earthly power. It will come from heaven with Him when He comes in His glory. As believers we are joint heirs with Him of this kingdom, kings and priests unto God, and we shall reign on the earth (Rom. viii, 16, 17; Rev. v, 9, 10). That we may walk worthy of His kingdom and glory let us understand the promises to David and Abraham, believing fully the supernatural birth of the Messiah (Matt. i, 1, 20-23). Let us worship Him as did the wise men and be as obedient as Joseph and Mary (Matt. ii, 11, 13-15). Let us continually give all honor to Him whom the Father and the Spirit so honored (Matt. iii, 16, 17). Let us overcome the devil by the word of God, as Jesus did, and become His faithful followers (Matt. iv, 4, 7, 10, 20, 22). Being heirs of such a kingdom, let us manifest the spirit of it and make the hastening of it our first business always (Matt. v, 16; vi, 33). Being of good cheer because of sins forgiven, let us be filled with the Spirit and go about doing good as He did (Matt. ix, 2, 22; Acts x, 38).

As His witnesses we must depend upon the Spirit always and fear nothing, not even death (Matt. x, 20, 28, 30). Wholly submitted to God, we may know and make it manifest that His yoke is easy and His burden light (Matt. xi, 27-30). Having become to Him as brother, sister, mother, our hearts may be so full of Him that out of the abundance of peace and joy which He will give us we shall always speak His praises (Matt. xii, 34).

THE TEMPLE BELL.
 A Mysterious Disappearance and the Explanation.
 By CLARISSA MACKIE.
 [Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]
 Hedges and I toiled up the dry bed of Furnace creek and left Death valley. "Hark!" said Hedges in a strange voice.
 Across the hidden jagged ranges came a sweet musical echo. It was repeated again and yet again to my astounded ears.
 "It's a bell," I almost screamed at him, "a bell here—a church bell in Death valley!"
 With a choking cry Hedges melted from my side. I heard the stamping of his mule and then the sharp clatter of small hoofs among the stones.
 "Come on!" he shouted back at me. "Once in India I heard it and"—His voice died away in the darkness, and when the sound of hoofs ceased altogether I was left alone with the intermittent sound of the bell.
 I stood listening, listening, until at last my feet moved toward that spot in the gloom where my burro was picketed. I felt for and found the remaining bag of ore which Hedges had left to my share, and I flung it across the back of the beast with eager hands.
 A great clearness was in my mind, and in my heart was a yearning pity for the poor—the poor of the world, at whose feet I longed to pour my sack of gold—and I hastened forward eager to give all that I had to charity.
 The bell rang softly as I approached, and every chime fell straight on my pitying heart. A faint red glow was reflected on the rocks ahead, and around the bend of a huge boulder I came upon the temple in the wilderness.
 The red light came from the same tiny lamp hanging within the tiny building. It tinged the gray rocks with a strange, unearthly coloring and gave to the white walls of the temple a delicate rosininess.
 My knife ripped a hole in the canvas sack, and then, staggering because for you. Don't say another word until you have rested."

 Late in the afternoon when the sun was drawing down behind the dark range Hedges told his story:
 "Five years ago, before I met you, Medford, I traveled for a large dealer in precious stones. I went to Calcutta on the track of a pair of magnificent pigeon blood rubies, the property of a gambling maharajah, who was hard pressed by his creditors.
 "These I bought, together with several other splendid stones, the combined value of which was $200,000.
 "I walked into Calcutta from the maharajah's palace just as dusk was falling. Perhaps the pressure of my revolver against my breast gave me assurance, for it is a dark and lonely road, but there was a fascination in watching the dying of the red glowing Indian sunset and the coming of the velvet black darkness jeweled above with stars and pointed here and there with gleaming lights from scattered dwellings.
 "I was crossing a bleak stretch of wild ground, rank with parched grass and weeds when I first heard the temple bell—the same bell that you heard last night and from which I ran away.
 "It seemed as if all the poor down-trodden, plague stricken natives of India called appealingly for alms. It mattered little that the jewels were not my own. I tore them from my belt with feverish impatience and threw them into the alms basin, and they disappeared. Then something happened, and I went down, down!
 "When I regained consciousness I was still lying in the parched grass, and a pariah dog was licking my face. The stars shone overhead, but the temple was gone—marble walls and floor, luring bell—all gone!" Hedges buried his head in his hands and was very still.
 "And what did you do?" I asked after a long silence.
 "I raved like a madman," returned Hedges, lifting his head fiercely. "I ran into the city and found a man whom I knew, and he put great forces to work and discovered nothing. No one had seen or heard of such a temple, and they believed I had been drinking and been set upon by robbers.
 "I would be breaking stone now if I had not had a rich relative who lent me the fortune to replace the stolen gems. I am repaying him now."
 "Of course I am ruined," I said.
 "Half of what I have is yours, Peter, and you can pay me back," he said quickly.
 I held up my hand. "I couldn't, Hedges. You know I am grateful. I am engaged to marry Ethel Lambert, as you know. I have nothing but my money, and as a capital whatever, and I must journey down into Death valley for the gold to get a start. I have lost it and must begin again. I cannot ask her to wait much longer, and the professor—"
 "Is Professor Lambert a stuff on money?" demanded Hedges. "I thought him quite the other way, you know."
 "He isn't a bit mercenary," I said hastily. "Only I haven't got the face to take Ethel from her luxurious home into the poor quarters I can now afford, and so—"
 "So you'll both be miserable forever after," interrupted Hedges dryly. "Let's go back to San Francisco and see Professor Lambert before you do anything desperate."
 We resumed our journey the next day and several weeks afterward found ourselves once more in Death valley. I had a shaven and shorn, ringing the professor's door bell. I did not ask for Ethel, but my eyes were aching to see her, and so I was taken through the house and into the long passageways that led to the laboratory.

His gray head bent above some fragments of greenish metal.
 of its great weight, I lifted the gold and poured the precious lumps into the alms basin.
 As the first lump of ore clanked into the basin the clearness in my head seemed to snap as if some one had struck me a sharp blow. I felt myself sinking, sinking to the marble floor. It seemed years before I felt its cooling touch on my cheek, and then all was dark.
 When I awoke stars were shining out of a black sky, and I heard a hoarse whinny from the burro near by. I was lying on my back, and my temples throbbed dully.
 The white temple had disappeared. My eager search among the rocks was unavailing.
 Thus I found myself a beggar at the gate of Death valley.
 I saw that Furnace Creek ranch was somewhere—it must be near, and without food and with only a small canteen of water I set forth on a journey that I knew must end in death.
 The next day I met Hedges. He was riding slowly toward me with eyes fixed on the ground. Behind him trailed a pack mule. His bag of ore had disappeared.
 "Medford!" he almost sobbed as I trudged painfully into view. He slipped from his mule and ran toward me with outstretched hands. "What is the matter, old man? Why didn't you follow me that night? I had to go. You see, I had heard the bell before!"
 I stared at him from hopeless eyes, and he read the truth.
 "You didn't—you followed the bell?" he stammered.
 "Yes," I said thickly.
 "And your gold—the ore?"
 "I gave it—gave it to the poor of the world," I said bitterly. "I had to do it."
 He nodded understandingly. "I will tell you my experience, Peter, after you have eaten. I have food here and materials for a fire. I will make some coffee."
 "Where have you been?" I asked.
 "I found the ranch. I left my sack there and loaded with food to return

Human Beings Once Walled Up!
 Building Foundations.
 The practice of putting money into the foundation stone of a new building is the shadow of an older tragic custom. The money stands theoretically for the ransom of the human beings who by ancient superstition should have been buried in its place. Other-wise, it was held, the building would not stand firm and endure.
 There was a time when this particular kind of human sacrifice had a vogue extending to most parts of the world. Even in England skeletons have been found imbedded in the bases of castle walls, and there is record of one German fortress at the building of which a child was bought from its mother with hard cash and walled into the donjon tower, the unnatural mother, according to the story, looking on the while. Effigies of human beings are still used in some parts of Europe as harmless substitutes, and in remoter and more ruthless places the old custom crops out from time to time in all its grim reality. Within the last century two children, a boy and a girl, were, it was reported, walled into a blockhouse by some laborers at Duzaga, Asiatic Turkey.—Westminster Gazette
 Millais' Faith in Himself.
 The artist Millais, writes J. E. Reid was as open and frank as a boy in expressing his belief in himself. When the Leyland collection was on view previous to its dispersal, Millais went to see it and openly asserted that his "Eve of St. Agnes" was the best picture there. This egotism was part of his character; a thing it was impossible to resent on account of the manner in which it was expressed. Millais never lost the self confidence of youth. In this respect, as in many others, he remained a boy to the end. Neither was the egotistic note confined to art matters. His public speeches were invariably about himself. His conversation on all subjects was impregnated with the essence of a sincere conviction of his own authority to speak. He liked to be always right, and such were his grasp of realities and his power of reasoning that it required very strong evidence and a very clever argument to convince him that he was wrong.—Youth's Companion
 Flagg at Eton.
 On more than one occasion Dr Hornby, the famous headmaster at Eton, is said to have fogged the wrong boy in mistake. A boy thus victimized was asked why he did not attempt to expiate himself or offer any explanation. "If you had not been caught out," said the tutor, "why did you not say so to the headmaster?" "Well, sir," he replied, "I thought that if Mr. — had not complained of me some other master might have done so. The young scapegrace was so seasoned a campaigner that he was prepared to take a fogging without asking capricious questions as all in the day-work. From Eton Under Hornby."
 The Story of Four Uncles.
 "I have four uncles," writes a correspondent, who are all widowers. Uncle Sam and his wife used to fight. Uncle Tom was always flirting. Uncle Joe was ruined by his wife's extravagance. Uncle Martin alone loved his wife, and when she died he was broken hearted. Still, he is the only one who married again. He married a girl who has all the qualities he used to proudly boast his wife lacked. Men are funny and grow funnier as you know them better.—Athenaeum Globe
 Under Water.
 Howell—They can take photographs under water, can't they? Powell—I guess so. I got a negative there once. Howell—I don't understand you. Powell—A girl refused me while we were in bathing.—New York Press.

When he had warmly greeted me I told my unlikely story, knowing it was scarcely credible, yet when I had concluded the professor took me by the hand and led me into a back room.
 Then he told me the story of how he had experimented with bell tones, bopping to carry out a theory of his own that some day he might produce a bell whose tones might find a response in human hearts. He hoped to attain a pitch of tone whose vibration might strike a chord of human sympathy in every heart, that the hearing of it might promote good fellowship and love and end in universal peace—a very pretty theory.
 The one casting he had made had resulted in producing that strange bell whose call was to sacrifice, to give all in response to its command. Startled at the production and still uncertain as to its value, he was shocked to awake one morning and find that his assistant had disappeared and with him the bell.
 Secretly he had pursued the man. His agents had trailed the thief from country to country, and even after I had fallen senseless in the little chapel and had been thrown into outer darkness by the adventurer the detectives had fallen upon the temple and carried it and the thief triumphantly to San Francisco and Justice.
 A train of burros carried the stage setting from place to place. Wherever men walked in solitary places with gold or silver or precious stones the temple might be found.
 "Your gold ore is in that sack in the corner," concluded the professor, with a smile. "And now suppose you go down and see Ethel."
 Eager as I was to meet my sweetheart, I waited long enough to telephone the strange story to Hedges, patiently waiting in the hotel to share his golden story with me, before I went to claim my happiness.

SEE THESE BEAUTIFUL LINGERIE DRESSES

Daintiness and style have been carried to the highest degree in these charming garments.

Materials are excellent in quality. Trimmings are particularly pleasing in design. Some are adorned with lace and embroideries combined. Others are made of all-over imported embroideries. On still others Valenciennes and Cluny insertions have been employed.

Models are graceful and becoming, and making careful throughout.

Even if you bought lingerie gowns earlier in the season you will certainly find a place in your summer outfit for one or more of these lovely frocks.

They represent the latest styles produced, yet are most moderate in price, ranging from $2.98 to $7.98 each.

WASH WAISTS—PRETTY AND CLEVERLY MADE

The Season's Latest Productions

Careful, skillful making perhaps more than any other thing is responsible for their superiority. There is little of the regulation old-fashioned shirt waists about them except the name.

True, some of the styles are very simple, but there are novel touches about even the plainest.

More elaborate models are simply bewitching—delicate lacy effects or rich embroidered blouses.

Values as well as styles are exceptional—the low prices typical of this store prevailing in every instance.

No woman was ever known to have too many dainty waists, and this season both the fancy and tailored varieties are going to be more fashionable than ever. You can't go amiss in choosing a number of becoming styles from this impressive array.

Prices range from 75c to $2.50.
